

Motion tabled to allow time to study policy

Faculty Senate to vote on admission standards

By Tim Rohwer

UNO's Faculty Senate will hold a special session Oct. 28 to decide whether to approve UNO's version of the proposed new admission policy for the University of Nebraska system.

The Senate tabled the motion at its meeting Wednesday to allow some members more time to study the policy.

"Some members had not seen the policy until they walked into the meeting, so they wanted more time to review it," said Senator Janice Rech of the College of Arts and Sciences.

Rech said she hopes the Senate can act quickly on the proposal because central administration of the NU system wants UNO's report as soon as possible.

Under the proposed policy, high school students would need to complete four years of English, three years of math, three in natural sciences, two in social studies and four in academic electives. The policy is expected to take effect within four years.

Rech said there will actually be two proposed admission policies.

"One will come from the central administration of the NU system which will have the bare minimum of requirements. And each campus can increase those requirements if they desire," she said.

The policy triggered a lengthy debate at the meeting Wednesday.

day. Vice President of the Senate George Garrison, chair of black studies, told the members the proposed policy could hinder many inner-city youths from attending college.

"Any institution of higher education in an urban area should look at the needs of the urban area," Garrison said. "If we took a survey of non-white graduates at UNO, half of them would not have met these requirements. This is not an argument about raising standards, but we need a more realistic approach."

Rech responded, "We are doing an injustice to the students knowing they are not prepared. Our whole purpose for these new requirements was to try to come up with these courses to help students graduate."

Gore pushes ticket in Omaha

By Elizabeth Tape

Democratic Vice Presidential candidate Al Gore made a stop in Omaha on Wednesday to reflect upon the Clinton ticket and his vice presidential debate Tuesday.

"I sure did enjoy last night," Gore said.

Gore spoke to an estimated rally crowd of 3,500 people at the Nebraska National Guard Armory. About 500 members of the crowd stood outside the building because of fire code regulations.

The crowd also heard from U.S. Congressman Peter Hoagland and U.S. Sen. Jim Exon before Gov. Ben Nelson introduced Gore.

To a chorus of loud applause and cheering, Gore took the stage, paid tribute to both U.S. Sens. Exon and Bob Kerrey, and urged the crowd to vote for Hoagland.

Gore spoke about recent news reports of investigations into Democratic Presidential candidate Bill Clinton's travels as a college student.

"They (the Bush administration) sent out orders around the world, to employees of our State Department, people paid by your tax dollars, to rummage through private files — looking in vain — trying to get politically damaging material. I think that is outrageous. I think the president owes this nation an apology."

Gore then turned his attention to another unfolding story.

"George Bush funneled millions of dollars to Saddam Hussein during the years and months and days leading up to the invasion of Kuwait. In spite of all the warnings (about the Iraqi military), George Bush continued to use our tax dollars to subsidize Hussein."

"A lot of money was funneled through a bank in Atlanta, and it turned out to be the biggest bank fraud in the history of the United States of America," Gore said.

About defense concerns, Gore noted the recent endorsement of 21 military leaders and renewed the Clinton-Gore commitment to "maintain a strong military — to protect our national security."

On economic issues, Gore cited statistics about job losses nationwide and noted that in Nebraska, business failures have increased 250 percent in the last four years.

He spoke also about the distribution of wealth in America, saying, "For the first time since the Roaring Twenties, this year, the top 1 percent now controls more money than the bottom 90 percent."

Gore then turned to agricultural concerns, noting struggling farm households with diminishing incomes.

Gore also spoke about some of Gov. Clinton's successes in Arkansas, referring to education, welfare reform, job creation and health care. He noted Clinton was voted by all 49 other governors "the best and most effective governor in the country."

Gore concluded his speech with another remark about the Bush administration, "They've run out of time; they've run out excuses; they've run out of proposals. With your help, on Nov. 3, they're going to be run out of office, and we will elect Clinton president of the United States of America."

President/Regent candidate Steve Meacham.

Meacham relies on experience

By Elizabeth Merrill

Second in a three part series on Student President/Regent candidates.

Steve Meacham said his experience in Student Government gives him an advantage in the President/Regent race.

"I know the channels that you need to take in order to get things accomplished," he said. "I don't have to learn how to write a resolution or if it needs to go through a committee. I know all of this."

Meacham, a junior majoring in general studies, has been on the Student Senate for two years. He has also been a new orientation leader, a member of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity and president of the Interfraternity Council.

Meacham said his involvement in different campus organizations helps him gauge student opinion.

"I feel that I've been in touch with a number of different students where I can convey their interests to the regents," he said.

One concern Meacham would like to address with the regents is UNO's position with upcoming budget cuts to the University of Nebraska system.

"There's no way we're going to avoid a budget cut at all," Meacham said. "We're to get cut somehow. It's just minimizing the cuts and making sure programs like the capital (construction) improvements that we need are going to go through."

Meacham said he also supports the plan for dormitories at UNO, but a lack of funding may stall plans for construction.

"It's more of a long-term effort," he said. "Right now, we don't have the land or the funds."

Another issue Meacham said he would address is the lack of a late-night study area on campus.

"It would be nice to have the library open later even if the services were stopped because it's a good place to study," Meacham said.

Meacham suggested that an area that already has 24-hour access to students, such as the computer room in the Eppley Administration Building, should be further utilized for studying purposes.

Native American culture thrives

By Gary Ogden Harper

Monday's quincentennial of Christopher Columbus' voyage to the New World was considered a "time for national healing," according to Chief Wilma Mankiller.

Mankiller, the first woman ever to be elected leader of the Cherokee Nation, spoke at UNO Monday on the survival of Native Americans during the past 500 years.

Mankiller said she opposed the myths perpetuated by western movies, novels and art which suggest Native Americans are near extinction.

"Not only have we survived, but we have thrived," she said to the audience of nearly 1,000 in the Student Center Ballroom.

Honoring Mankiller before her speech, singer Gary Rush told the audience that the four colors held sacred by all tribal ancestors were red, white, yellow and black.

"Even before knowing that the rest of the world existed," he said, "my people knew that there was a grandfather for every color."

Much of Mankiller's speech traced a personal family history repeatedly disrupted in early years by constant relocations. Many of the relocations were attributed to treaty violations resulting from accommodations made to facilitate the exploitation of natural resources found on reservation lands, she said.

"It is stupid not to recognize these contracts just because they are considered too old," Mankiller said. "There are plenty of other documents with much longer histories which are still considered to be legal."

"In the 1850s, many academicians were still debating whether Native Americans even possessed a soul. Yet at the same exact time, several tribal schools were instructing students in the advanced sciences, including the study of Latin and philosophy."

She said that until 1971, tribal leaders were directly appointed by Washington politicians, pointing out that most of them were lawyers and bankers. Mankiller said she alleges that many had very little or even questionable Indian roots.

stereotypes about women who serve in positions of leadership, Mankiller told the audience to learn from the Native American experience. She cited the current presidential elections as receiving too much emphasis.

"Too many people are waiting for some 'great leader' to come along and solve all of our problems," Mankiller said. "But real change isn't going to come about until each and every one of us take more personal responsibility for getting involved in education and curing racial problems."

A full day of activities preceded the evening lecture which was jointly sponsored by a number of campus and community organizations. Besides a Native American cuisine featured in the UNO cafeteria, children from the Emmy Gifford Theatre presented a "mock trial" of Columbus during the lunch hour and Mankiller participated in an afternoon panel discussion carried on closed-circuit television.

Anneliese Cawthon, director of the Multicultural Affairs Office, credited several UNO students for establishing a Quincennial Committee that spent several months making arrangements for the Columbus Day activities.

Several members of the local community who attended the speech said they found inspiration and hope in Mankiller's message.

Former University of Nebraska-Lincoln student Celie Ferron said, "Omaha really needs more events like this. There were a lot of things brought out tonight that our children need to know about and understand."

"LAST YEAR I EARNED A 3.5 AND $10,000."

"My G.P.A. went up last year, but I guess that figures. A major university study showed that students who work 15 to 20 hours a week do better academically. It's true for me. And I've got UPS to thank for it."

"I know students who work for UPS do better financially. I'm working part-time and making about $10,000 a year. The hours are good too. I only work about four hours a day, so I still have time for classes and study. Chances are you'll be offered a position in Operations. But you could wind up working in Accounting, Industrial Engineering, I.S. or Customer Service."

"Think of it—great pay, flexible hours and maybe even better grades. There isn't another outfit anywhere with a better deal than that. That's a lot better than average."

Covering the issues

For those of you keeping track, we've reached the halfway point of the semester. Fifteen Gateways down, and 14 to go. Not that we're counting.

In honor of the festivities surrounding mid-term week, we decided to tackle a hodgepodge of various issues instead of concentrating on just one.

Student elections are coming up next week, and the President/Regent race promises to be an exciting one.

STAFF EDITORIAL OUR VIEW

Mike "He dropped your parking tickets" McKenna will face off against two candidates that are well-rounded in the UNO community, Steve McEacham and Jennifer Newhouse. Get ready for a run off election.

The Gateway opted not to endorse a President/Regent candidate this year, although we did bat the idea around for a week or two.

And don't forget to stop at the octagon and vote. Each student election garners less than 10 percent voter turnout. Surely more than 10 percent of UNO's student body is frustrated with parking, tuition increases, lack of services and budget cuts. It only takes a couple of minutes, so get off your ass and do it.

Last Thursday, the rain, the regents and the governor came to dedicate the Fine Arts Building. The building joined the ranks of Kayser Hall, Allwine Hall, the Health Physical Education and Recreation building, and the Student Center as the plaque was read and the building was officially opened and it finally became ours.

The dedication was a plan seen in its fruition for Fine Arts Dean David Shrader, who fought ardently for the construction of the unique building conducive to the arts. You may not like the "uniqueness" of the building (we won't form an opinion on that in this column, either) but the building is new, architecturally nonconformist, and it is ours. So get used to it.

1992 may be remembered as the year the Gateway "boycotted" Homecoming. We were bombarded with phone calls this week and heard plenty of griping around campus that our coverage of the event wasn't up to snuff. We did run a rather lengthy preview of the events in the Oct. 6 Gateway and had planned to run a photo of the king and queen in Tuesday's paper. A photography (ahem) problem forced us to shelve the photo, but thanks to SPO, a few pictures that captured the events are featured on page 8. OK?

Finally, let's close this column with something controversial: How about them Braves?

Character issue simply not important

During this campaign, much has been made of the character issue. The candidates, it would seem, feel as though character is the utmost attribute a president needs to run the government and lead the nation. A lack of character, they imply, would cause national havoc and drive us into socio-economic ruin.

In President Bush's viewpoint, dodging the draft in one's youth and then attempting to whitewash the episode in future years indicates a lack of character. In other words, one cannot morally lead soldiers into combat as commander in chief if one has not only failed to serve in the military but has also tried to escape service during wartime.

On the other side of the character debate, Bill Clinton feels a president who erred during his first term in office should not be given a second chance. That is, a policy blunder while in office should immediately disqualify the candidate from further service, even if the mistake may have been honest.

Then there's Ross Perot; the man who left the military early in his enlistment so he could establish a private business. Should his faulty memory of the circumstances surrounding his discharge keep him from serving as president?

To answer the question of whether character should be used to decide the election of our leader, I decided to look up some background information on several past chief executives.

I deliberately chose those presidents who made a dramatic impact on the American way of life to determine the extent to which character, as indicated by personal events, had influenced them.

While they were all good men, I was surprised by some of the indiscretions they had committed — indiscretions which today would become a major campaign issue.

George Washington, for instance, was at one time in love with a married woman named Sarah Cary "Sally" Fairfax. This love persisted, even after he became engaged to Martha Curtis (later to become Martha Washington), and he corresponded with Mrs. Fairfax frequently. "You have drawn me, dear madam, or rather I have drawn myself, into an honest confession of simple fact," he wrote in 1758. "Misconstrue not my meaning; doubt it not, nor expose it. The world has no business to know the object of my Love, declared in this manner to you, when I want to conceal it."

Thomas Jefferson, architect, botanist, engineer and third president of the United States, is perhaps best known for being the author of the Declaration of Independence. Which is ironic, considering that Jefferson, long an advocate for the equality of man, owned nearly 200 slaves when he died.

Unlike Washington, who stipulated that his slaves be made free upon his death, Jefferson left no provision — all of them were kept in bondage and sold off by his wife to repay the debts he also left behind. Moreover, it is believed certain that Jefferson had an ongoing affair with one of his slaves, which in turn produced several illegitimate children.

Abraham Lincoln was none too shy about sex, either. He once had made a specific request of a neighbor to let him watch a young bull in action. But Lincoln is also known for a character flaw that others even today (especially today in the U.S. House of Representatives) are guilty of: He was a frequent bad-check writer.

Grover Cleveland, the only president to be elected to two nonconsecutive terms in office, was notorious for his affairs; perhaps you've heard the campaign slogan "Ma, Ma, where's my Pa? Gone to the White House, Ha, Ha, Ha!" More than that, President Cleveland was a (gasp) draft dodger. He had been called to duty during the Civil War, but instead chose to pay for a substitute under the Conscription Act of 1863.

These are but four of the many presidents who had some form of character flaw that could and would become an election issue if those men ran for office today. Affairs outside of marriage were the most common peccadillos amongst these former leaders. However, I found no evidence that these affairs or other character flaws greatly impacted their decision-making ability.

So, it appears I have answered my own question. Character in a president may be a good indication of how that person will act in office, but there really is no evidence to support this position. If anything, all the candidates are guilty of a lack of character; it's an issue we, therefore, shouldn't even worry about.

UNO kicks off season with 'The Puzzler'

An expanded version of a very successful department of music program gets underway this week with the initiation of the 1992-93 season of "The Puzzler," in which students listen to brief segments of music and compete to identify the classical compositions from which they were taken.

Kermit Peters, professor of music, offered some details.

"Students come into our listening lab, Room 238 in the Strauss Performing Arts Center, anytime during the week and they'll be given a tape labelled 'The Puzzler.' They listen to it in the lab, then turn in a ballot indicating what they think the piece is," he said.

Each week for the next 18 weeks, a different piece of recorded music will be available for listening. Each week's Puzzler will be selected by a different faculty member and can be listened to for as long or as often as the participant wishes throughout the week, during listening library hours, Peters said.

on stage

by elizabeth tape

At the conclusion of the 18 weeks, Peters said the total number of correct answers for each participant will be determined, and the five or six individuals who have identified the greatest numbers of pieces correctly will gather for the finals in early April. The finals will be held at the Strauss Performing Arts Center stage. At the finals, the previous scores are wiped out and tallies begin again, he said.

The overall winner will receive $300, a sum donated in part by Anne Marie Seidler, "a supporter of the department and an advocate of the program," Peters said.

Part of the reasoning behind the Puzzler, Peters said, was that "the music department felt we wanted students to have a broader knowledge of classical music than we could provide in the classroom."

"We have 6,000 classical records in our library, and we had thought that our students didn't know enough of those and this has helped considerably. We really want to encourage people to listen to the music."

Peters said many people enjoyed last year's event.

"The professors have a lot of fun and the students do, too. It has become a really interesting, challenging opportunity for our students," he said.

Last year, the program was open only to music majors, but this year it is open to anyone, he said.

"It's been my experience that students who are not music majors frequently know a lot of classical music and so we might have some real surprises."

Film a dream for Billy Crystal

Billy Crystal's directorial debut, the poignant yet sweet "Mr. Saturday Night," had its world premiere at the Toronto Film Festival Sept. 12. Scripted by Lowell Ganz and Babaloo Mandel (script writers of "City Slickers" and "Parenthood"), the film covers 50 years in the life of comedian Buddy Young, Jr., a character Crystal created early in his career. The morning after the film's debut screening, which Crystal attended, he and co-stars Helen Hunt, Julie Warner and David Paymer met with the press to speak about their film.

"I love this character," Crystal said. "Of all the characters I've ever done, this is the most interesting.

"For me, it was a chance to do a character that was so interesting, so multi-faceted, so lovable, so unlikable, so maddening, so frustrating. I wanted to really tell this story against the framework of the show business that I grew up with, which I think that we did really well."

Crystal said he populated his film with several real characters for a very specific reason.

"I wanted Buddy — who didn't exist, of course — to have a reality about him and that meant having him have cronies."

In addition to the real Jerry Lewis, Crystal incorporated actors

The Kat makes the change to country

Move over, Kat, there's a new dog in town.

Wednesday morning, KXKT changed its primarily alternative format and moved on to country music. The station formerly known as the Kat, now goes by KT-103.

Last March, KXKT began filtering alternative music over the airwaves of Omaha.

"We just started blending alternative music in with the contemporary music we were playing," said KT-103 program director Mark Evans.

After poor ratings, Evans said the station decided to make a change.

"They were terrible," he said of the Kat's ratings.

Evans said the country format is not experimental, but instead, very permanent.

"It's about as permanent as permanent can be," he said.

KT-103 is now catering to a new audience which is pleased with the format, but the old audience is a little unhappy, Evans said.

"Obviously, some people were disappointed with the change," he said. "We've also had people who enjoy country music call and say they really enjoy it."

The only thing serious about this bunch is their sense of humor. It's proudly displayed on the latest CD cover and in the band's video. Their old touring van is driven off a cliff.

"It looked good to us," Quirk laughed. "Our first record company, Alias, loaned us $10,000 to get a van for touring. We paid them back over five years and a week after the last payment, the transmission went out. We could've stuck it in the front lawn or done something with it."

Too Much Joy's third and latest effort is called "Mutiny." It's a batch of fun pop that covers a lot of bases. Not only is the music great, but the liner notes are a comedy sketch in themselves.

"Donna Everywhere" is taking college radio by storm. Bubbling over with good feeling, the song is as catchy as the common cold. The video is even catchier.

Conceived by Pen and directed by his partner Teller, the band is given $36,000 and turned loose to do a video. They buy new instruments and take over a shopping mall, spraying the Too Much Joy logo on everyone and everything.

'Our Town' opens Friday Your Real Horoscope

It's amazing how much can be accomplished with about 10 chairs, two ladders, some light beams, a few sound effects and some beautiful costumes, when 21 talented and committed actors, under the guidance of a meticulous director, come together to tell a story.

Such is the case with the UNO theater department's production of Thornton Wilder's "Our Town" on opening tonight in the new Fine Arts Education Building.

Featuring narration by the stage manager, played by John Hatcher, "Our Town" examines events in the small New Hampshire town of Grover's Corner at the turn of this century. Focusing on the members of two somewhat contrasting families, the Gibbs and the Webbs, the play paints a detailed picture of day-to-day life in this bucolic town.

on stage

review by elizabeth tape

Protagonists Emily Webb (Emily Key) and George Gibbs (Paul Winner), who have been friends all their lives, have reached their teen years. In course of the play, they fall in love and marry, but this reflects only the beginning of Wilder's deeply emotional tale, as many events will follow these joyous goings-on.

Woven into the fabric of this not-entirely idyllic little community, is the presence of the alcoholic choir director, Simon Stimpson (Jerry Wall), who at one point nearly explodes onto the stage, stumbling and staggering in his drunkenness. Also wound into the story, is a perception that all is not well with the Webb family. They engender a sense of uneasiness and tension, with occasionally bitter disagreements.

These varied emotional states — the love, the devotion, the simplicity, the camaraderie, yet the sporadic hostility — are beautifully communicated by a skillful cast, led by the remarkable performances by Key, who effectively radiates a sense of delicacy about her character and who creates an enveloping aura of innocence and ingenuousness.

Also inspired is the performance of Winner as the love of her life, Gibbs. Winner is asked in the course of "Our Town" to convey a wide range of emotions, including exhilaration, sorrow, adoration and appreciation among a host of others, all of which he handles impeccably.

Charleen Willoughby as Mrs. Gibbs and Doug Dickey as her husband Dr. Gibbs, also electrify the theater with their quiet but intense performances.

Andrea Thompson as Emily's mother does a fine job in a less-than-sympathetic role, and T. Lynn Mitchell, as her husband, interacts well with many characters. Lissa Hall, Jerry Wall and professor Richard Duggin, in supporting roles, shine in their relatively brief, but important moments in the production.

The handsome costume design was beautifully rendered by the creative Kathleen Gossman, despite her having been hospitalized for emergency surgery in the course of the rehearsals. She has since fully recovered.

Assistant professor Ben Wilson also significantly augmented the play's strong moods with his outstanding lighting design.

The use of ladders to represent in the production's minimalist style the upper floors of the two homes works well, as does the instance when the stage manager addresses the audience from the theater's balcony.

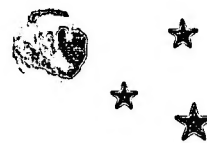

Sound designer Jonathan Warman has also contributed integrally to the quality of the production with his musical selections, such as his choice of the dramatic "Dies Irae," from Verdi's Requiem, or Barber's haunting work, "Adagio for Strings."

With its thought-provoking content, enhanced by an intriguing set design and lighting design, by carefully constructed costumes, by excellent musical selection, and by splendid performances, all brought together by Paterson, with a clear vision of his interpretation of "Our Town," UNO Theater's debut production in the new space is a not-to-be-missed experience.

"Our Town" will be performed Friday and Saturday evenings at 8, and then resume next week, Wednesday through Saturday also at 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Education Building Theater. For further information, call 554-2335.

According to Quirk, Teller wasn't a very silent director. "Once you get him started, he won't stop. We would've liked to get a few words in edgewise."

"In Perpetuity" is an acoustic number that reveals an emotional side of the band. The feeling here is that everything is one. Everything that is new, is old and vice versa. There is nothing more than us.

Closing out "Mutiny" is a Husker Du-like rant called "Sorry." It's a short, but strong song that is a perfect close to an effort like this one; full of puns, alternative views and slightly morbid in a few places.

"We're serious art rockers," Quirk explained wryly.

For those who are already converted fans, there is the Too Much Joy line of fine merchandise. While there still is a possibility of the semi-permanent tattoos, as seen in the video, there's also something new.

"Too Much Joy kneepads," Quirk exclaimed. "They're great for skatepunks and Donnas in movie theaters!"

portraying another of other real comedians and writers.

"Neil Simon, Larry Gelbart, many great writers, Mel Brooks, Carl Reiner — they were all writing on the staff of 'The Sid Caesar Show.' So in my effort to always make Buddy real and his career exist, I had a Woody (Allen) look-alike, and it always gets a big laugh.

"I love it because it makes it real; the same with 'The Ed Sullivan Show' flashback."

Preparing for the role of Buddy, Crystal said, involved some doing.

"I had 14 pieces of makeup; I would say about four or five pounds a day. It took five and a half hours to get into it and close to two hours to get out of it."

For 53 days, Crystal said he was required to wear this complex makeup while directing the film.

"I would take a 2 a.m. makeup call and would hope to get a rehearsal at 7:30 a.m. Many times, they would bring us out and we weren't done, and half the face would be painted."

Crystal experienced an unexpected consequence of directing while in makeup.

"The days I was old and directing, the crew would talk lower and slower and louder to me, 'You want the camera here, Pop?'"

Co-star Julie Warner said of working with Crystal, "It was a great gift to be a part of someone's dream coming true, which this is for Billy. I never thought I was working with a rookie director, and I think it's artful and masterful. The fact that it's his first directing job is pretty incredible."

Following up, co-star Helen Hunt said, "I don't know how there was time or energy in Billy to be supportive, but when someone tells you that you're doing a good job and that he's happy he hired you, it makes you want to leap tall buildings to make his life easier, and that's what it was like on the set."

As for the initial decision to direct the film as well as star in it, Crystal said, "It was scary to make the decision to do it. I was sitting with some very powerful people talking about the script, Rob Reiner and Barry Levinson, and they'd say, 'You have to direct this. You must direct this,' and I'd say, 'I can't.' But once I said 'yes,' I was fine because I knew how the room should smell. When you know that much detail about it, when you feel it as deeply as I did, and once I committed to it, I just feasted."

Directing was both demanding and rewarding, Crystal said. "I found this to be the most creative and wonderful experience I've ever had in my life. The most difficult thing about it was the makeup and the keeping my energy up creatively. It was an unbelievable challenge.

"Every day I got stronger, and after the 83 days of shooting, I was ready for more. The hard part was stopping because it meant that one of the great creative times of my life was coming to an end."

A Glimpse at Homecoming '92

"Cake with the Candidates" was an opportunity for students to meet the Homecoming hopefuls Tuesday.

"Corrido de los toros," or the "Running of the Mavericks" was the theme for this year's Homecoming Week festivities.

The week was kicked off with "Cake with the Candidates" and ended with the Minneapolis Gospel Sound performing at the Strauss Performing Arts Center. Those days in between were filled with a hayrack ride and bonfire, a Homecoming parade, a tailgate cookout and the crowning of a king and queen.

"This Homecoming is about just going out and having a good time," said Student Programming Organization (SPO) director and Homecoming coordinator John Heaston. "We're not out to be all serious."

Hail to the King (and queen). Queen Melissa Sehestedt and King Wade Lewis show off their royal garb.

Magazine peddlers target unsuspecting students

By Kim Balkovec

UNO students should not purchase subscriptions from anyone on campus trying to sell magazines, suggested Charles Swank, director of Campus Security.

Swank said he has received complaints during the past several years about magazine salesmen on campus and salesmen in shopping centers pretending to be UNO students. This semester, security officers on at least two occasions have seen salesmen at UNO and asked them to leave, he said.

"I know it's tough to figure out what's on the level and what's not. You might think it's a chance to help out a fellow student, but it may not be a fellow student," Swank said.

Campus Security officers are not police officers and, therefore, do not have the authority to arrest anyone on campus, unless they commit a felony, he said.

"What we have to do is try to get a police officer here to arrest them before they leave. When we call the cops, they're going to take off."

"The only thing we could really detain them for, same as you as a citizen, is if they committed a felony. But for misdemeanor offenses, we have no authority. It's a scam, but certainly not a felony," Swank said.

The Student Senate recently issued a letter of statement to Campus Security and the Gateway about the presence of salespeople and the need for student awareness in dealing with them.

Senate Speaker Andria Palmesano said she was approached by an individual trying to sell magazines outside the Eppley Administration Building this fall.

"The letter of statement was not so much because of this incident personally, because I've seen these people up here before and know better than to buy anything from them," Palmesano said. "We felt, however, that it was a good idea to alert all students to how these magazine salesmen operate, especially to newer female students who may not have run into this type of pitch before," she said.

Mary Reynolds, a senior majoring in political science and secondary education, said she was approached on campus three years ago as a freshman. She purchased a subscription from the salesperson and did receive her magazines.

Reynolds added she was also approached this semester. She said she has seen these magazine salespeople on campus every year and their selling strategies have become more offensive.

"It seems to be primarily good-looking men targeting young women," she said.

The only people permitted to sell anything on campus are members of organized student groups recognized by Student Government, said Al Karle, manager of building services for the Student Center. He said only fund-raising sales, such as bake sales are allowed.

"They would still need to receive permission from our reservations manager, Madelyn Griffin," Karle said. "Other than student group fund-raisers, we will never give anybody permission to sell anything on campus."

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

IF YOU THOUGHT COLLEGE WAS EXPENSIVE, TRY PUTTING YOURSELF THROUGH RETIREMENT.

Think about supporting yourself for twenty-five, thirty years or longer in retirement. It might be the greatest financial test you'll ever face. Fortunately, you have one valuable asset in your favor. Time.

Time to take advantage of tax-deferral. Time for your money to grow.

But starting early is key. Consider this: if you begin saving just $100 a month at age thirty, you can accumulate $192,539* by the time you reach age sixty-five. Wait ten years and you'd need to set aside $227 a month to reach the same goal.

At TIAA-CREF we not only understand the value of starting early, we can help make it possible—with flexible retirement and tax-deferred annuity plans, a diverse portfolio of investment choices, and a record of personal service that spans 75 years.

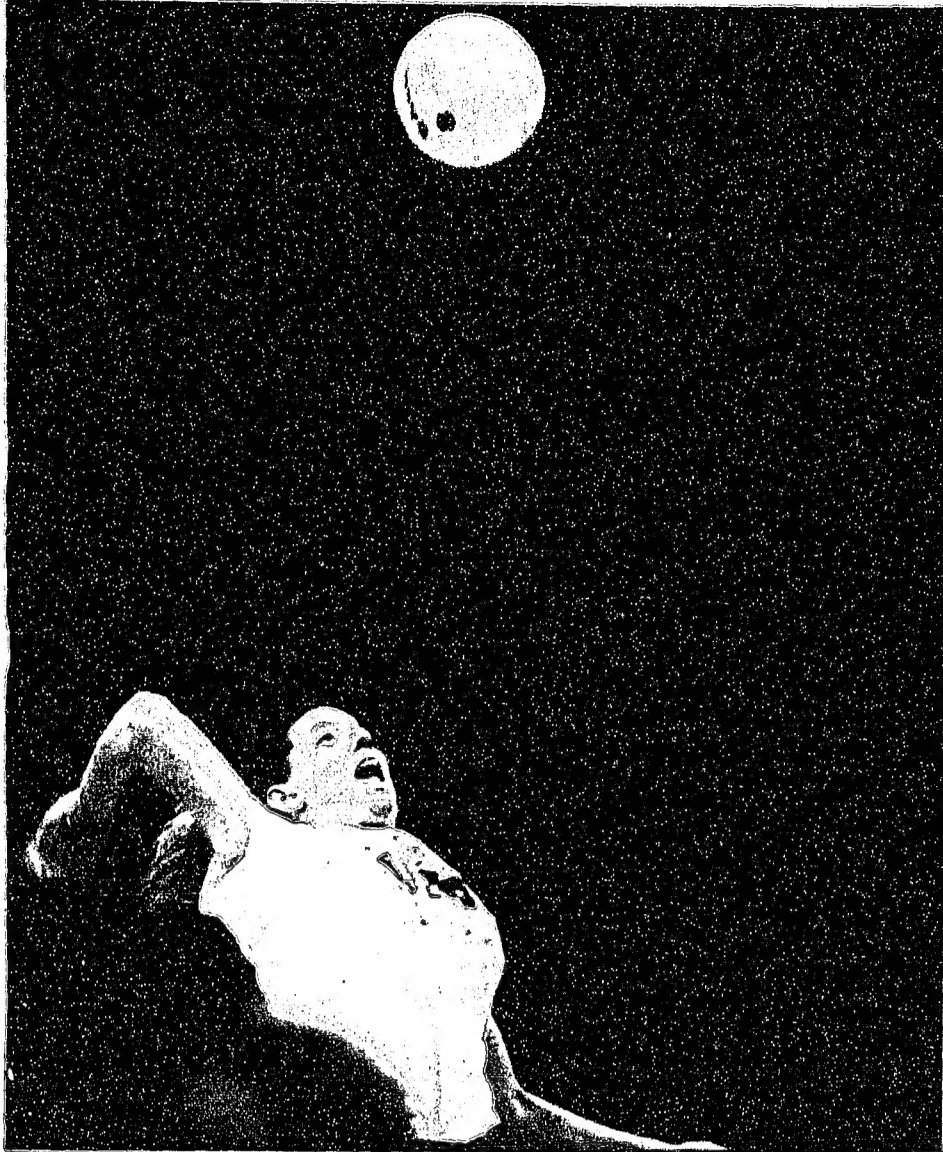

Over a million people in education and research are already enrolled in America's largest retirement system. Find out how easy it is to join them. Call today and learn how simple it is to put yourself through retirement when you have time and TIAA-CREF on your side.

Start planning your future. Call our Enrollment Hotline 1 800 842-2888.

Lady Mav middle blocker Dawn Hottovy practices her serve. The UNO volleyball team will play at North Dakota State Friday and the University of North Dakota Saturday.

Lady Mavericks ready for northern exposure

By Lance Braun

The UNO volleyball team heads north this weekend in an effort to head north in the rankings.

The Lady Mavs, ranked No. 19 in this week's Division II poll, travel to Fargo, N.D., tonight to take on North Dakota State, and to Grand Forks, N.D., to play North Dakota Saturday night for two important North Central Conference (NCC) contests.

North Dakota has a 9-6 record with a 1-1 mark in the conference. North Dakota State, currently ranked No. 3 in Division II, is 20-1 overall and 2-0 in the NCC.

Junior Shannon Hop said the Lady Mavs are ready for the challenge.

"We're not nervous; we're ready to play," she said. "We think we're ready to prove to the conference just how far we've come in the last few years."

Junior Laura Kelly agreed with Hop.

"We're really excited about this weekend because North Dakota State is ranked high, and North Dakota is a team we should beat," she said.

The Lady Mavs are riding high, coming off a pair of conference wins at home last weekend.

UNO bombed South Dakota 15-2, 15-5, 15-0 Friday night and outlasted Morningside 15-11, 15-9, 11-15, 15-6 Saturday night.

The wins raised UNO's record to 14-6 on the season and 3-2 in league action.

"Our attitude is really good right now," Kelly said. "We're coming off two NCC wins, and we've had a good week of practice. The practices have been intense, but they've been more focused on fine-tuning our play."

"We're gradually working up to where we want to be," Hop said. "We should be hitting our peak in about a month or so, but we're definitely getting better every week."

Hop and Kelly expressed opinions on what they feel the team strengths are.

"I think our strengths right now are team unity, and the fact that we have such strong bench support," Hop said. "It's not like we have six players who have to play well. We know we can go to our bench if we have to. It takes a lot of the pressure off the starters."

"Our blocking, really, our entire defense, has been a key to our success this year," Kelly said. "We had a ton of digs against Morningside. Kevin Campbell had 27, I had 23, Dawn Hottovy had 20 and so on. If we can keep doing things like that, we'll be tough to beat."

Game time for North Dakota State is 7 p.m., and the North Dakota contest begins at 5:30 p.m.

Mueller changes Maverick tactics

By Lance Braun

UNO football coach Tom Mueller was running out of options, so he turned to the option instead.

This weekend when UNO travels to Greeley, Colo. to take on the Northern Colorado Bears, they will take a new offensive scheme with them — the "I" formation.

"If you look at our year so far, we've had a hard time running the ball," Mueller said. "Our top two quarterbacks are out for the year, and they were both drop-back passers," he said.

Mueller said last week's 37-7 loss to Mankato State had a big impact on the decision to switch.

"Against Mankato State, we felt we couldn't drop back to pass and protect against an aggressive defense. We looked at the defenses that we'll be facing the rest of the season, and realized we needed plays that hit quicker," he said.

UNO will need to hit quickly against Northern Colorado. The Bears, 4-2 overall and 2-2 in the North Central Conference (NCC), carry an 11-game home winning streak into the contest. UNO is 2-4 overall and 0-4 in NCC action.

Junior Rodney Brown will get his second start of the season at quarterback for the Mavericks. Last weekend against Mankato State, Brown led all UNO rushers with 79 yards, but threw five interceptions out of UNO's pro-style, single back offense.

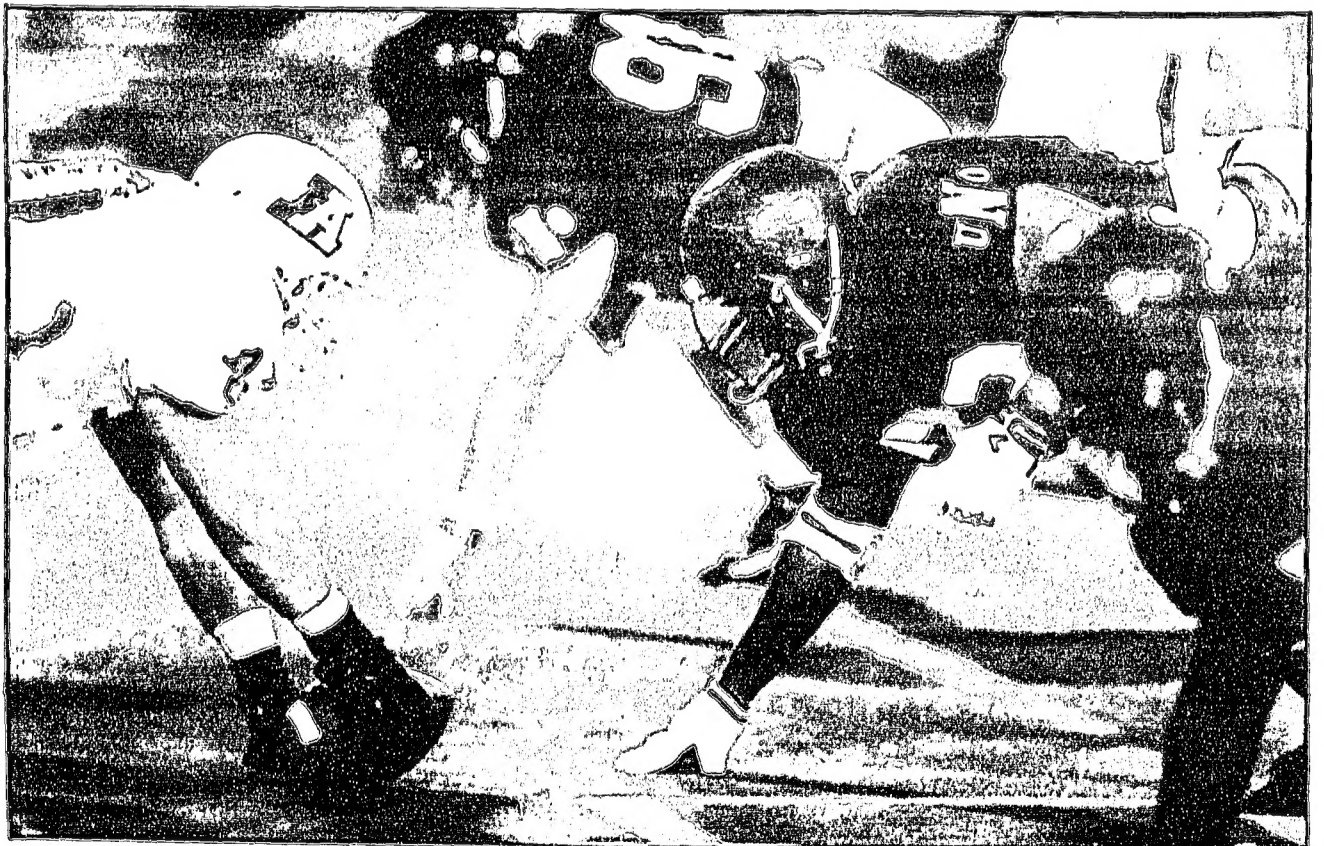

Mueller thinks that will change this week.

"Rodney's like any athlete. He was trying to make anything happen against Mankato State. He was probably pressing a little bit. Now, we'll try to play our passing game out of roll out, but the first look will be to run, then to pass. Our roll out last week did get us some rushing yards," he said.

Northern Colorado returns some key personnel from their 8-3 squad from a year ago. Quarterback V.J. Lechman completed 119 of 203 passes for 1,706 yards and 11 touchdowns last season, and has thrown for 840 yards this season. Running back Chuck Snowden leads the Bear ground game with 528 yards rushing on 117 carries, and receiver Joel Horn has almost already matched his totals of last year, netting 18 catches for 236 yards.

Mueller said despite the potential Northern Colorado has, they haven't lived up to expectations this year.

"In the preseason, they were one of the highest-ranked teams in the conference. We watched them on film, and we didn't see anything different from any other high-ranked team," Mueller said.

—Ed Carlson

Maverick nose tackle Brian Holston heads up to take on the Augustana offensive line. The Mavs will play at Northern Colorado Saturday.

"The puzzle about them is that they've got all those key people back, but something just isn't clicking for them. Sometimes a team just doesn't hit on all cylinders," he said.

Mueller said the key to this week's game is consistency for the Mavericks.

"We have to be much more consistent than we have been. It's frustrating that we can play one good half against some good teams, but we can't put together one complete game. Sometimes I think it's getting to the point where we are waiting for something bad to happen to us," he said.

The Mavs posted their biggest win of last season when they upset then-No. 3 ranked Northern Colorado 13-7 at Al Caniglia Field.

Quarterback Paul Cech, returning from a shoulder separation two weeks prior, hit wide receiver Shon Mitchell on a 45-yard touchdown pass to put the Mavericks ahead 7-0 in the first quarter. Running back Abel Fernandez scored from four yards out midway through the third quarter, giving the Mavericks a 13-7 lead. The Bears launched a comeback in the fourth quarter as Lechman hooked up with Horn on a 58-yard strike that pulled the Bears back to a 13-7 deficit.

The Bears could get no closer, however, as the Mav offense chewed up the clock when they had the ball, and the Mav defense shut down Northern Colorado's passing attack. Mav defensive back Rodney Bradley intercepted a desperation pass by Lechman with eight seconds left in the game to preserve the win for the Mavericks.

Game time for Saturday's contest is 2 p.m. Omaha time.

Hit Man stumbles; Killer 'B' strikes back

By Lance Braun

I think I've proved my point. I said to give Daren "Hit Man" Schrat some tough games and he would falter.

Daren had his worst week of the season last week, hitting seven out of 10 games for 70 percent.

He picked one-shot wonder Ohio State to beat Illinois, which they didn't. Ohio State always falters in the Big 10. He picked "Gutless" Gary Gibbs' Oklahoma Sooners to beat Texas, which they couldn't. He also picked Virginia to beat Clemson. Clemson owns the Atlantic Coast Conference — that is, until Florida State arrived this year.

And he rips on me because Citadel is in my Top Ten? Last week, while The Mighty Citadel Cadets were destroying Tennessee-Chattanooga, raising their record to 6-0, Arkansas (Citadel's first victim) was knocking off No. 4 Tennessee. That merits a jump in my ratings for the boys from Charleston, S.C.

For helping me to accurately predict the rest of the games this season, I've developed a few simple rules of thumb: First, always pick Miami. The Boys in Orange (usually Orange Bowl, too) have beaten everyone, everywhere, in almost every kind of environment. However, I would like to see the 'Canes play either Nebraska or Colorado in the same kind of weather conditions the two teams played under in last year's 19-19 tie.

Second, have a lucky quarter to flip when picking SEC games. Any team can beat any team at any time in that league. Arkansas proved that last week.

Third, Oklahoma can't win a tough game to save its life. The Sooners will not win against a respectable team this year, and that includes Kansas.

Fourth, Nebraska can win all its Big Eight games — as long as it's not against Top Five teams. Give Dr. Tom some credit, though.

DUELLING SAGES

He has realized that Tommie Frazier is his Quarterback of the Future and decided to play him in (gasps!) the FIRST HALF last week.

Finally, as the end of the season draws near and the games get tougher, look for "Hit Man" to fall like a leaf off a tree. I have foreseen it. It is his destiny.

The scoreboard reads: Hit Man, 23-6-1 (78 percent), and Killer B, 18-10-2 (63 percent). Take away my worst week (3-7), and Daren's worst week (7-3), and the records are Hit Man, 16-3-1 (82 percent), and Killer B, 15-3-2 (80 percent).

I think I'll change my nickname to "The Comeback Kid." I usually like being on top, but coming from behind has its rewards, too.

Here's this week in college football:

UNO at Northern Colorado

How can UNO win? Haven't they lost four in a row? Aren't they down to their third-string QB? Doesn't Northern Colorado have a 11-game home winning streak? Aren't they seeking revenge for UNO's 13-7 upset last year? Why am I picking UNO to win? Why ask why?

UNO 16, Northern Colorado 14

Oklahoma at Colorado

Oklahoma fans are realizing that Gary Gibbs ain't no bootlegger's son. They are also realizing that QB "State" Gundy won't lead them to the promised land. Kordell Stewart is out with a broken wrist, but look for Koy Detmer U., 23-0-1 in the Big Eight since 1989, to end this one early.

Mavs of the Week

Mav defensive tackle Doug Presser had six tackles and a quarterback sack last week against Mankato State and was named by UNO coaches as one of the players of the week. Mav Coach Tom Mueller said Presser played his best game ever for UNO.

Kevin Campbell and Laura Kelly led the Lady Mav volleyball team to victories against South Dakota University and Morningside College. Campbell recorded the highest number of digs in a North Central Conference match this season with 27 against Morningside. She also added 10 kills and two aces. Kelly had 23 digs, 14 kills, a pair of solo blocks and two aces against Morningside.
